Now, I appeal to every one among you to tell me whether you do not clearly see that if the masses of men and women would make it different, unalterably more blessed if men sought or cared for the welfare of the masses of women? Oh, that they would be but true men, and that women would be the holy and gracious things which God meant them to be! For when they in-fudge themselves in their place they cease to be true men and true women. The man whose heart is ever burning with envy and hatred and sullen jealousy and mad ferocity—is he not a tiger? Is there pleasure in his life?
The man who has enslaved himself to appetite and drunkenness, the man who is smitten with the wand of a woman, the man whose pleasures are like those of a brute—what can he give in a serious study—is he a man or is he a beast?
To the ape or to the swine? The man who has given over to lies and malignity—has he no right to be called a serpent?
Of course! Expel from the human heart all the

Is that colored woman coming to do your work?" asked a woman of a friend who had a great deal of trouble with servant. "Well," was the reply, "she is coming here to live, and if she likes the work, I guess maybe she'll do it."
